Grants from the Fund for the Region to the Jamestown Renaissance Corporation has allowed JRC to engage, inspire and lead city residents and officials into making Jamestown more beautiful.

According to Mary Maxwell, JRC neighborhood project associate, the Healthy Neighborhood initiative has created several programs designed to strengthen local neighborhoods by increasing owner confidence through collaborations, interactions and beautification, and to inspire others to reinvest.

Those programs include Hands on Jamestown, Community Gardens, Jamestown Historic Districts, Renaissance Block Challenge and, new in 2019, Paint Jamestown.

In 2019, the Renaissance Block Challenge and Paint Jamestown will focus on properties in the Allen Park/UPMC Chautauqua neighborhoods on the city’s south side. Like previous years, homeowners performing exterior renovations can apply for matching funds and support from local experts, such as contractors and landscapers.

Paint Jamestown offers 10 homeowners in this area grants to paint the outside of their property in one of 50 historic color schemes.

Since 2011, the Renaissance Block Challenge has engaged 450 homeowners and landlords and invested more than $1 million to property owners through personal investments and small matching grants.
For the second year in a row, Give Big CHQ, the region’s only 24-hour online fundraising event, will raise as many dollars as possible for local, nonprofit organizations.

Through a partnership with the Northern Chautauqua Community Foundation, this year’s event will include organizations located in, or serving, the entire county.

For additional details about this year’s event, or to see if your favorite organization is participating, contact Elizabeth Jones, CRCF research and engagement associate at ejones@crcfonline.org or call (716) 661-3390.

Executive directors, Tory Irgang, CRCF; and Diane Hannum, NCCF; announce a county-wide event.

In Memoriam

The Community Foundation offers its deepest condolences to the friends and family of three community visionaries we are grateful to have known.

Maurice Roach, lifelong Falconer resident and owner of Falconer Printing and Design. Along with his wife, Doris, Maury led the efforts to create the Falconer Region Community Fund.

Roland Swanson, WWII veteran and US Navy SEABEE established several funds to benefit local students, nonprofit organizations and his community at large.

Dr. James Lyons, former Jamestown resident and member of the Jamestown High School Class of 1950 was instrumental in creating a scholarship fund to support future JHS grads.

Where Are They Now?

After several educational opportunities took her halfway around the world, Emily (Schlick) Garrick has returned home.

The 2007 Jamestown High School graduate earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in History from Wells College and a Master of Science degree for Teaching English as a Second or Foreign Language from the University of Rochester.

While completing her degrees, Emily studied abroad in Costa Rica and India working with children from birth through high school to improve their English speaking skills.

Today, Emily teaches English as a New Language to fifth and sixth graders at Washington Middle School in Jamestown.
